BARGE MAY BE LOST

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 13.—Grave fears are entertained today for the safety of the barge Mantanzas, which, on Tuesday, sent out wireless appeals for assistance. The vessel carried a crew of seven men.

The revenue cutter Onondaga responded to her wireless appeal that she was in danger from the high seas off Hatteras, with her radio gone. The Onondaga is still searching in the vicinity of the cape.

WALL STREET TODAY

New York, Dec. 13.—Opening—Fractional advances were noted at the opening. Union Pacific opened at 156, one point advance, and receded fractionally during the first few minutes.

11 a. m.—An advance which carried Union Pacific to 157 1/2 was followed by recessions taking most stocks to slightly below opening. The market was quiet.

Noon—Steel dropped to 64 1/2 and recovered to 65 1/4 during the second hour. The general list declined fractionally.

HELD IN $10,000 FOR ASSAULTING WHITE WOMAN

Stamford, Dec. 13.—James Tanner, 16, colored, pleaded guilty in the city court this morning to criminally assaulting Miss Lillian Wolf, white, yesterday morning, early, on Summer street and was held for the Superior court in $10,000 bail.

WOMAN DIES FROM HER INJURIES DUE TO AUTO ACCIDENT

Waterbury, Dec. 13.—Mrs. James Strockbine, wife of the manager of the Hitchcock Hardware Company, died at the Waterbury Hospital, this morning, from injuries received in an automobile accident at Oakville, last night. Mrs. Strockbine suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Mr. Strockbine was driving the car shortly after 6 o'clock, and in going down the main street in Oakville, met an auto the headlights of which blinded him and on passing the car found himself within a few feet of a heavy wagon which was also coming toward him. He turned sharp to one side and ran into the post which supported the machine to a stop throwing the occupants of the car out. Mrs. Strockbine was on the front seat and landed on her head and shoulder. The others, including a man and his wife, who were in the rear seat, received minor cuts and bruises. The machine was badly smashed.

DEFENDANT GOES BACK ON UNION IN DYNAMITE TRIAL

Indianapolis, Dec. 13.—The first breach in the ranks of the 41 union ironworkers on trial here for alleged dynamite conspiracy was opened today when Paul J. Moran, defendant from St. Louis, repeated on cross-examination his statement that he was out of sympathy with the union men. The district attorney was delighted to have brought out that there was something about the administration which Moran was not in accord with.

The other defendants seemed far from pleased with Moran's attitude. McManis testified that Moran had planned a dynamiting at Mt. Vernon, Ill. Today, Moran swore that he did not visit the place until three weeks after the explosion and then at the request of the International Association, with the permission of the St. Louis local executive committee, for lawful organization work.

A letter from the witness to J. J. McNamara, dated in Peoria, Ill., 1907, was read, advising the "men in Indianapolis to keep from attempting any aerial performances." The government alleged in opening that "aerial performances" meant dynamiting. Moran explained, today, that he meant "to keep our men from going up in the air while non-union men worked and our men were unemployed."

BODY AND FACE MASS OF ECZEMA

Grew Worse Until Hands and Feet Swollen and Running Sores. Skin Would Drop Off in Scales. "Practically a Shut-In." Cuticura Soap and Ointment Entirely Cured.

Brownville, N. Y.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me of a stubborn case of eczema which followed a severe case of scarlet fever. My body and face was a mass of sores so that I was practically a shut-in. It grew worse until my hands and feet were swollen and running sores. I tried many remedies. One kind which I used fairly burned my skin up so that it would drop off in scales as if it was scalded. But thanks to good advice I then used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In a short time I was entirely cured. Now my skin is clear as ever and I have had no return of the disease. I hope this letter will help the suffering ones who are fighting eczema." (Signed) Miss Edna Bidwell, Jan. 10, 1912.

GANS-MCGOVERN BOUT ANNIVERSARY RECALLS OLD CHARGES OF FAKE

It was twelve years ago today that Joe Gans, the "old master" among the lightweights, was knocked out by "Terrible Terry" McGovern in Chicago. That battle has been and is a subject of rabid discussion among the boxing bugs, and the anniversary revives the old question, "was it a fake?" Gans himself admitted that he had entered into a "gentleman's agreement" before the battle, and by its terms was to gracefully succumb before the onslaughts of the Brooklynite in the fourth round. He declared that he had found McGovern able to administer more punishment than he cared to take, as he himself was under an agreement not to do anything in the way of real retaliation, and he therefore decided to quit in the second round, instead of waiting for the fourth.

That may be the real explanation of the matter, but there are still thousands of admirers of "Terrible Terry" who steadfastly believe that he administered a real knockout. Certainly the colored man gave an excellent imitation of crying "fake," but nobody believes that Terry had anything to do with the fixing. The Brooklyn whirlwind always fought to win, and no suspicious ever attached to his career. Gans, great fighter and a thoroughgoing champion, was mixed up in many affairs that were at the least shady. In signing to meet McGovern in Chicago on Dec. 13, 1900, Gans had agreed to stop his opponent within six rounds. A lot of "wise" money was wagered on the result, and it was some time before Gans was able to get back in the good graces of the sporting fraternity. Eventually he triumphed, and defeated Frank Erne for the lightweight championship of the world at Fort Erie, Ont., in 1902. He defended his title against Jimmie Smith, defeated the Californian, although the latter declared that he had broken his "ulna bone," defeated Battling Nelson at Goldfield, only to later lose his title to the Dane. Considering the McGovern-Gans fight, Gans gives the negro the distinction of being the only champion in the history of the ring to be knocked out and afterward recover his title.

PRESIDENT LOWELL OF HARVARD, 66 TO-DAY, WAS LONG A LAWYER.

Abbott Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University since the retirement of Dr. Eliot in 1909, will today receive the congratulations of faculty, students and alumni on his fifty-sixth birthday. While Dr. Lowell's ancestry cannot be traced back to the Mayflower, he is a descendant of the John Lowell who settled in Boston in the seventeenth century, and whose descendants have included many famous men, among them James Russell Lowell, the late poet. Born in Boston on Dec. 13, 1856, President Lowell is of Irish, English, Scotch and French ancestry, breeding, environment and temperament a Bostonian—a Back Bay Bostonian.

A pure-bred Bostonian is always one of two things. He is a snob, a would-be aristocrat, who lives in the luxury, and spends two-thirds of his time bragging about his ancestry, the remaining third being consumed in dreaming about his ancestry. He is that, or he is one of the most useful and democratic of men, broad, tolerant and intellectual, a realist and a social reformer. President Lowell belongs in the latter category. When he stated that he wanted Harvard to be a "poor man's college," he was voicing a sincere conviction. If he had his way, he would abolish the "old coot" in which the rich students segregate themselves, and establish dormitories in which the wealthy and the poor would mingle on terms of democracy. And he thinks that the wealthy would be the greatest beneficiaries from such an arrangement.

President Lowell was for many years a practicing attorney and in that capacity he rubbed shoulders with all classes and types of humanity. Graduating from Harvard in 1877, and from Harvard Law School in 1880, he formed a law partnership with his cousin, Francis C. Lowell. He had many relatives who were merchants and manufacturers, and these turned over all their legal business to the young attorney, giving him an excellent start in his profession. His time was largely occupied looking after the affairs of the numerous Lowells, and he devoted spare time to study. In 1891 he formed a partnership with Hon. Frederick J. Vinton and continued the practice of law until 1897. In the latter year he was appointed a lecturer on government at Harvard, and this began a series of lectures that was to culminate in his assumption of the presidency of his alma mater. Three years later he became permanent professor in the science of government, Eaton professor in 1903, and in 1909 he was elected president of the university.

In a recent interview President Lowell had this to say regarding his aspirations and ambitions for the great educational institution placed in his charge.

If prefer that Harvard should be a poor man's college. I do not mean that it should be attended only by poor men, nor that the wealthy should be entirely excluded, but rather that, as in the community at large, the poor should predominate. I desire that the university should be truly representative of the great world outside—rich, poor and middle class. "That is the ideal student body in which the balance between rich and poor as it exists in the community also exists at the university. The working class predominates in the community and the working class should therefore predominate at college. I hope Harvard will ever be a main representative of the whole community. She is growing more so every year, for there is a steady increase in working students—a trend more and more toward the poor man's college. Harvard is by no means a millionaire's club, as is erroneously believed by many people."

On Second Thought

By Jay E. House

Clem Bixby, who is married again, was divorced from his first wife. "Yes," he said to an old friend who came in yesterday after a long absence, "I am serving my second term."

When a man can restrain his indignation long enough to shed his coat the fight never comes off.

When a man begins to raise money on his clothing the first bundle of white goods.

It is Tank Beverly's idea that a tidy fortune awaits the inventor of a device which will enable a fat man to scratch his own back.

This rule holds good in most instances. In looking for trouble first find an affinity.

When a man says his baby waked the household but once during the night is he boastful or apologetic?

MARQUARD DECLARES MCGRAW IS JEALOUS NOW

Also Compares Himself As An Actor to George Cohen.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 13.—Rube Marquard, premier slatman of the New York Giants, declared that McGraw was jealous of his success as an actor.

Marquard compared himself as an actor favorably with Louis Mann and George Cohen, and predicted a brilliant stage future for himself. He declared that he was booked for twenty-two weeks, and unless the New York club came across with a contract for $10,000 he would stick to the stage and give up baseball for all time.

Marquard has become quite stuck up since going on the stage and carries a valet along and hands out tips that would equal those of many a millionaire.

CRAWFORD AND TY COBB WON'T GET SALARY RAISE

Detroit Owner Says Players Can't Grab All the Money in Baseball.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 13.—President Nevin said yesterday that he would not grant Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford the advances in salary they demanded if they both quit baseball.

"For three or four years it has been said in certain quarters that Cobb and Crawford were all there was to the Detroit team," he said. "That if they were taken out of the lineup the Tigers would be a chronic second division team. Well, they were not taken out of the lineup last season, and the Tigers were a chronic second division team, finishing sixth. So that theory is disproved. And now they are both asking for big raises. When a ball player gets more than $5,000 he has passed the limit of his worth as a ball player, and is drawing the extra money for some quality which brings it back at the gate."

"Cobb undoubtedly has a lot of the spectacular stuff that draws the money. But he didn't draw it at home last year. On our first home stand 500 was a fair crowd, and 1,000 was a hummer. So you see it isn't Cobb and Crawford alone who draw the money, but the fact that the Tigers win games. When they don't win, people stay away."

"Before a baseball club pays out big money in salaries, it is necessary to take it in at the gate. We won't pay Cobb and Crawford what they ask, simply because we can't. Baseball is a business and we must conduct it in a businesslike manner."

FOOTBALL FANS WILL SEE BROOKLYN AND COLUMBIANS

The Brooklyn and Columbia football teams will play tomorrow afternoon at Newfield Park for side bet of $100. Both teams have been practicing every night this week and are in the best condition of any two teams that have met before in this city. Both teams go on the field confident of victory and a good clean game is looked for. The team takes the field at 2:30 p. m. Kick off at 3:30. A large crowd will probably be on hand when the whistle blows.

SHOOTS HIMSELF AND THEN BEGS TO HAVE LIFE SAVED

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 13.—With a bullet lying in his right temple, F. Edward Karl, 53, whose wife and daughter are living in Stamford, Conn., today lies at Cambridge Relief Hospital, in a critical condition. Karl, who is a cabinet maker, came here some weeks ago from Stamford. He shot himself, he said, because he was despondent. The man made two attempts to kill himself, the first bullet inflicting only a scalp wound on the top of his head. The next time he stood before a mirror to shoot. He walked unaided to the police station where he begged for a physician to save his life.
